

Review by Betty

A Christmas Carol is a short story written by Charles Dickens.

This story is about a cold old man. He is lonely on Christmas Eve. He doesn't have friends because he likes his money more than anything. On Christmas Eve, three ghosts visit him to tell him about his past, present, future Christmases. The old man learns from the ghosts how he was wrong in the past and changes so he can have a happy life too.

This story is very good. You want to read it from the start to the finish because you want to know what happens to Mr Scrooge. The story teaches that money doesn't make you happy and you need to be with other people too. When a person cares only about money, they won't be happy. I liked the book because it tells a good story.